

DROWNS IN QUARRY

Archie Meyers, Aged Twelve,
Loses Life.

ANOTHER DROWNS AT PEWAUKEE

Engineer Gleason Makes Heroic Effort to Save the Boy But Without Avail.

Archie Meyers, the 12 year old son of Walter Meyers, 105 West avenue, was drowned in the old Hadfield quarries between Grand and East avenues Tuesday afternoon. He and a son of George Harter had gone to the quarry and young Meyers went in swimming, but slipped from the shallow water over the edge of a sharp decline and went over his depth. He sank immediately.

His companion, knowing that Archie could not swim, started to run for help and managed to attract the attention of A. J. Gleason, an engineer on the Northwestern road. Without hesitating he shouted to his fireman and then leaped from the engine and jumped into the water, a few feet away. He found the boy on the bottom and brought him to shore where efforts were made to revive him but they were in vain. He died a few moments after being brought on shore.

Coroner Charles Hill, Sheriff Scholl and Dr. E. W. Malone went to the scene of the accident and it was decided to hold an inquest, the jury adjourning until Wednesday afternoon, after they had viewed the body. It was taken to the home on West Avenue. The lad's mother was prostrated by the sad news.
