

Va. Tech wrestler drowns in quarry

Virginia Tech wrestler Darren Hankins, 21, died Wednesday night after he drowned while swimming in a former rock quarry in Blacksburg, Va., the school said.

Hankins, from Chesapeake, Md., was swimming with several other people in a former quarry on private property and began having difficulty staying afloat, police said. His friends couldn't keep him above water. Searchers recovered the body around 7:30 p.m.
