

Sock Discovered At Quarry Belongs To Missing Boy

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — A sock found in a quarry by members of the Mark Twain Emergency Rescue squad Saturday has been identified by relatives of one of the three Hannibal boys who disappeared three days ago.

Bill Bridges, vice commander of the squad, said the sock was found by searchers in vicinity of Murphy's cave where the boys were last seen.

Bill Dean, a step-brother of 14-year-old Craig Dowell said the sock is definitely Craig's.

"We went home and got one just like it," said Dean.

Dowell and Joey Hoag, 13, and Billy Hoag, 11, were last seen entering Murphy's cave about 4:40 p.m. Wednesday.

A two-day search of Murphy's Cave was fruitless.

So, the searchers turned their attention to areas southeast of the cave.

Underground rescue teams, led by William Karras, president of the Speleological Society of America, searched passages under the road bed of a new highway being constructed through the south side of Hannibal.

Earth moving equipment had opened several entrances to caves and it was felt the boys have entered one of the holes.

Meanwhile, mounted auxiliary policemen were searching Lovers Leap, a high bluff overlooking the Mississippi River.

Bill Bridges, vice-commander of Hannibal's Mark Twain Emergency Rescue Squad, said many Hannibal youths play on the steep bluff sometimes digging their own caves.

"These boys have a history of digging. They were carrying a shovel when last seen," Bridges said.

He indicated another search would be made of Murphy's Cave.

Operations at Murphy's Cave were abandoned Friday morning after repeated sweeps through the narrow passages turned up no evidence of the boys, although playmates said they were seen entering.

Bridges planned to concentrate on an area of the cave that has been sealed by rock-falls during most of the search.

Two police dogs took their handlers to the base of the rock-falls on three occasions but could go no farther.

Rescue workers dug a new entrance to the cave on the far side of the cave-in but a search by underground teams turned up nothing.

Bridges said the Hannibal dog, Nemo, will be taken to the cave entrance again to see if he can pick up a scent.

The underground search is being conducted by members of the Speleological Society's underground rescue team.

Karras brought six members from Washington to join six members of the unit from St. Louis.

s And Funerals

WILLIAM EMORY DANIEL

William Emory Daniel, 86, of Moore Haven, died Saturday.

Survivors include his widow Rinba; one son, Broward; a daughter, Mrs. Mae Losenbeck, of Oca Locka; one sister Mrs. Bertie Littleton of Portsmouth, Ohio, seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Services will be at 10 p.m. Monday at the First Baptist Church, Moore Haven.

Burial will be in Osceola Memories Gardens, Kissimmee.

Pattison Funeral Home of Clewiston is in charge in arrangements.

WILLIAM H. NEWELL

William H. Newell, 82, of 111 W. 34th St., Riviera Beach, died Saturday.

Survivors include his widow,

MISS TERI LEE BROWN

Miss Teri Lee Brown, 18, of 210 W. 16th Way, Riviera Beach, died Sunday, May 7, in Mexico.

Survivors include her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Brown of Riviera Beach; two sisters, Fawn Robin and Katie, and two brothers, Robert and Tommy.

Friends may call from 3 to 5 and 7 to 9 p.m. Monday at the Howard Funeral Chapel, 2730 Broadway, Riviera Beach.

Arrangements will be announced by the funeral home.

BURNACE GRANT WILSON

Burnace Grant Wilson, 70, of 631½ Sixth St., West Palm Beach, died Saturday.

Survivors include his widow, Ruby; one stepdaughter, Mrs. Mamie Lue Lillard; one stepson, Willie Lillard, Jr., both of West Palm Beach; one sister, Alberta Carro 11 of Newark.