

The Roslyn Mine Disaster.

ROSLYN, WASH., May 12.—The work of bringing out the bodies of the killed in Tuesday's disaster is being carried on day and night as fast as brave hearts and willing hands can accomplish it. Five more bodies were taken out at 2:30 this morning. The rescuers have been working incessantly for the past forty-eight hours and are worn out, but they cannot be persuaded to cease work. Gas has congregated in vast clouds at the bottom of the slope, owing to fresh air being driven in and driving the gas before it. It would not be at all surprising should another explosion take place at any moment.

The managers of the mine think that if nothing intervenes the bodies will all be secured by midnight.

At a meeting of citizens last night a finance committee was appointed to receive funds beginning to come in.

Today at 10 o'clock the bodies of thirteen of the victims were interred. The funeral cortege started from Unity Hall, where the service was preached over the bodies of the dead. The funeral procession was a large one. The Knights of Pythias, I. O. O. F., I. O. G. T. and Masons dressed in full regalia were in attendance.

Widows and children are becoming more quiet as the time passes but there is still a large crowd around the mouth of the mine waiting for their loved ones to be brought forth. Their grief at seeing the charred and bruised remains of husbands, fathers or brothers brought forth is heart-rending. Many strangers are in the city, some brought hither by curiosity, others to render what assistance is possible. Another large funeral will take place tomorrow.
