

DEATH ROLL OF SIXTY ONE.

Two More Added to Red Canyon's List.

RECOVER FORTY-FIVE BODIES.

Only Nine of Those in the Mine Yet Remain to Be Brought Out—Revised List Shows Forty-Eight Families Bereaved and One Hundred and Eighty-Five Children Orphaned—Appeal to the Governor.

Evanston, Wyo., March 22.—Special to Tribune.—Andrew Mason, one of the injured of the Red Canyon mine No. 5, died at 12:45 to-day, increasing the number to sixty-one killed inside and outside. At 9 o'clock to-night forty-five out of the fifty-four victims in the mine had been accounted for. The rescuing party is still in the lower workings of the mine, and it is possible that they may recover the remaining nine before daybreak. Some of the bodies taken out are burned almost beyond recognition, and others so badly mangled that recognition is difficult, even to wives and children.

The following list includes the names of all the men known to be dead as a result of the explosion in and around the mine, up to 7 o'clock to-night:

J. B. Bruce, O. Maltby, J. W. Clark, William Sellers, Jr., Jerry Crawford, James Link, F. Morgan, Sol Clay, W. H. Grieves, J. G. Loch, Will Brown, George F. Hyles, D. W. Laurie, Charles Clark, Ben Coles, Thomas Booth, William Morris, John Morris, Sam Hutchinson, Albert Clark, John Wilkes, Henry Burton, Sam Holstin, William Graham, Jr., Joseph Hyden, William Pope, George Hardy, John J. Martin, David Lloyd, William Langdon, James T. Clark, Aaron Butte, John R. Fearn, William Weedup, Henry Southern, Samuel Bates, Charles Kussola, Gus Kassola, Isaac Johnson, John Lopaw, Matt Silt, John Lehl, A. Nyborn, Matt Johnson, Andrew Mason.

A careful canvass shows that forty-eight of the miners were men with families, and leave 185 orphaned children. As far as known but two carried life insurances, Maltby and Morgan, the latter with the A. O. U. W., and the former as a Mason.

Late this evening the rescuing party were forced to return to the surface, as large volumes of smoke forced them to retreat. However, it was but a few hours before the flames were extinguished, and the work of recovering the bodies still goes on. The Coroner's jury is inspecting the dead as soon as the bodies are brought to the surface, and will render a verdict when the bodies are recovered. This was considered the safest working mine in the State, as is attested by State Coal Mine Inspector Thomas and Superintendent Bradbury. From it all markets west and north were reached by its supply, including the Central Pacific, who are owners of the mine. The funeral of Fred Morgan will take place to-morrow afternoon under the auspices of the A. O. U. W., and O. Maltby will be buried Sunday under Albert Pike Commandery No. 1. The remaining dead will be buried early next week.

APPEAL TO GOV. RICHARDS.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 22.—Special to Tribune.—Governor Richards has received a message, asking for assistance for the families of the men killed in the mine disaster at Almy. Mine Superintendent Bradbury informs the Governor that forty-three widows and over two hundred children are left in destitute circumstances. Governor Richards is in conference by wire with Mayor Beard of Evanston in reference to the most advisable manner of proceeding in the matter. It is altogether probable that a public address will be made to the people of Wyoming by the Governor, soliciting voluntary contributions to relieve the distressed.
