

SIX DROWNED

AWFUL FATALITY IN A TUNNEL IN KASKA WILLIAM COLLIERY

Water Dashed in Upon Miners From an Old Working While the Men
Were at Work

Special to The Inquirer.

POTTSVILLE, May 27.—A dreadful mining casualty occurred at noon to-day at the Kaska William colliery, near Middleport, and a few miles east of Pottsville, in which six men were drowned by a body of water breaking in upon them from an old "working."

The names of the victims are: Peter Durkin, married; Carl Koskoskie, single; Vendel Kovitskie, married; Martin Molochin, married; William Morgan, aged 29 years, married, leaves a wife and two children; William Derr, single, aged 17 years.

The men were all tunnel men. Morgan was a loader boss and Derr a pump engineer.
