

BODY NOT YET RECOVERED.

The Last Body in the Sump at the
Auchincloss Colliery, Nanticoke,
Not Secured Yet.

In spite of the most persistent endeavors of those who are searching for the last body that remains in the sump at Auchincloss colliery, at Nanticoke, after the horrible accident of Wednesday, the remains are still in the water, and it is thought that the sump will have to be pumped dry before they are recovered. Men who have been grappling for the body have succeeded several times in raising it to the surface of the water, but it sank each time before they were able to secure it. The work goes on constantly, however, and will not cease until the remains are recovered. Preparations are being made for the holding of the inquest. It was thought that the investigation would be started this week but it has been found necessary to postpone it until next week.