

Six Miners Are Smothered in Snow

Met an Avalanche While Coming Down Mountain.

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 24.—A dispatch from Crested Butte, Colo., says six miners employed at the Augusta mine, nine miles northwest of that place, were caught in a snowslide while coming to town yesterday and swept to death. They were:

PETER M'QUADE.
JOSEPH FERRERI.
PETER STERLE.
JOSEPH SLOGAR.
MICHAEL VIDMAR.
TONY STENICHA.

The first four were single and the two latter were married. One body has been recovered so far. Many terrible slides are running in the Crested Butte section and there is great danger to mountain travelers.
