

BURIED MINERS SAVED.

Eight Men Rescued Uninjured From Copper Mine,

Ducktown. Tenn., Dec. 1.—The eight men imprisoned in the London mine of the Tennessee Copper company yesterday as the result of a shaft house fire, were rescued today. None was injured.

Mine Expert Ramsay, of the rescue station recently established by the federal government at Knoxville, arrived late yesterday, but two hours were necfour men in the wearing and use of four men in the wearing and us of oxygen helmets. The helmets were found, however, after entering the shaft, to be of such weight that they could not be worn with ease into the levels or "stops" and the four men returned to the surface and abandoned the helmets about midnight.

A rescue party of three was then formed and without helmets descended the shaft, finding the eight men on the sixth level. The miners were protected from smoke and gases by a partition they had built.

1909 Eight miners rescued in fire at London mine

Clipped By:

usmra_rob Sun, May 23, 2021

Newspapers™