

BURIED ALIVE, BUT ESCAPES.

Brazil Miner, Seriously Hurt, Is Rescued by Other Workmen.

BRAZIL, Ind., June 23.—George Faulkner, a miner at the Kokomo mine, west of this city, was buried alive for several hours this morning by a huge mass of slate which fell from the roof of his room. Faulkner was entirely covered, but retained consciousness, and when a mule driver went by several hours later he yelled to him for aid. He was rescued with great effort by several miners and was found to be injured about the back with serious internal injuries.

1911 George Faulkner rescued after several hours

Clipped By:

usmra_rob
Fri, Feb 12, 2021