

ENTOMBED BY CAVING EARTH.

Aged Miner Rescued in King Solomon Mine.

Only Head Protrudes When Companions Find Him.

Footpad Fires at Couple and Beats Retreat.

SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 11.—Imprisoned for twelve hours under a mass of rock and earth, Samuel B. Walker, an aged miner, was rescued in the King Solomon mine near Handsburg by companions. He had been working on a rich lead eighty feet below the surface. Suddenly the earth above him dropped, and he was buried with the exception of his head.

Unable to move from the great pressure which held him down, the entombed man suffered for hours, crying out to attract help. When missed a search was started, and he was found unconscious. He had been in a stooping position when imprisoned, and great difficulty was experienced in freeing him without bringing down the entire wall above. Besides internal injuries, Walker sustained a broken leg, fracture of the shoulder blade and otherwise was badly crushed and lacerated.

1911 Samuel Walker rescued after 12 hour imprisonment

Clipped By:

usmra_rob
Mon, Dec 6, 2021