

ENTOMBED MINER IS RESCUED

After Being Closed in 5 Hours at Sayre Colliery, Frank Let-ski is Taken Out Alive

After being closed in a blind heading for five hours at Sayre colliery Saturday afternoon and evening, Frank Leski, Mount Carmel miner, was rescued alive and well, without a scratch.

The man was working in a breast in the Mammoth vein and upon firing a shot blocked the manway. He had gone to a blind heading after lighting his shot and was entombed there when the rush came that blocked the manway.

The entombment was discovered immediately and the officials quickly had a force of men on the scene to rescue the man. Rapid headway was made and by working carefully the man was taken out of his underground tomb safe without any injury. He was able to walk home. He was entombed about three or four o'clock and was rescued about eight o'clock.
