MINE DISASTER BRINGS INVESTIGATION

Yukon, W. Va., March 29—With Chief R. M. Lambie of the state department of mines preparing to launch an official investigation into the mine disaster that yesterday killed 26 miners in the No. 2 mine of the Yukon-Pocahontas mine here, preparations were being made here today for the burial of the victims of the blast.

The last of the bodies were removed from the mine late yesterday. Bluefield citizens and volunteers from the little village were digging graves in the cemetery for the reception of the dead in the greatest disaster in the history of mining here.

The explosion was caused by an accumulation of gas. Soon after the men went to work yesterday morning a mighty detonation was heard. The mouth of the mine was closed, and when workers were able to clear a passageway only burned and charred bodies were found.

Using an indoor aerial of lamp cord Jose Franco Frazao, of 16 P. do Rio De Janeiro, Lisbon, Portugal, heard WGY, the Schenectady, N. Y., broadcasting station, January 22. The signals, picked up on three tubes, were received with sufficient strength to operate a loud speaker.

Carl W. Lee, a member of the Al G. Field's minstrels reports successful reception of WGY aboard the company's special cars while enroute from Reading, Pa., to Wilmington, Del.
