

NINE KILLED DURING FIRE IN OHIO MINE

Short Circuit, Caused By Boulders Falling on Conduit, Starts Blaze

HEROIC FOREMAN SAVES MANY LIVES

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Dec. 23.— (United Press.)—With nine of their comrades dead by asphyxiation, all of the other miners who were endangered when fire broke out in the Webb Coal Company's Cambria mine, near here, shortly after midnight, were accounted for today.

The 68 miners who escaped uninjured owe their lives to the heroism of their foreman, Jacob Schram.

Schram, controlling his panic-stricken men with an iron hand, led them to safety through an unused entrance a mile from the main shaft, where the fire occurred.

A short circuit, caused when a boulder fell on an electric conduit started the blaze. Sparks shooting from the wire ignited coal gas, which exploded with a deafening roar.

The dead are:

A. O. Truax, Shady Side; John Ferry, Webb Heights; Alphonse Zazanmi, Bellaire; S. A. Kellor, Webb Heights; Julius Taleberd, Shady Side; Edward Kennedy, Bellaire; John Kura, Webb Heights; Thomas

Continued on Page Sixteen.

NINE KILLED DURING FIRE IN OHIO MINE

Continued From First Page.
Spezens, Webb Heights; Martin Sezed, Webb Heights.

The Webb-mine is six miles south of here.

The nine men who lost their lives were caught in the pocket near the blaze, with all means of escape cut off.

Fire apparatus could not be sent to the mine from Bellaire or surrounding villages, on account of the impassable roads.

The mine had been closed and only recently resumed operations on a four-day-a-week scale.

Oxygen tanks, gas masks and other life-saving equipment were rushed to the scene.

News of the fire spread throughout the region, bringing hundreds of persons, including wives, children and other relatives of the miners, to the main shaft, where they stood in the bitter cold awaiting word from the men within.

After the short circuit flames and dense clouds of smoke quickly penetrated the arteries of the mine, extinguishing the lights and trapping the miners.