

Entombed Miner Is Rescued Alive

IRON RIVER, Mich., April 26. Imprisoned for 10 hours behind a wall of debris following a cave in at the Jones-Laughlin mine near here, Felix Norman has been brought out alive.

"I got pretty hungry, but outside of that it wasn't so bad," Norman said. "I could hear the boys working toward me and I knew they'd get there before I starved to death."

Norman was alive by air which surface workers pumped down into the cavity where he was entombed.

Matt Coronski, who was with Norman in the portion of the mine where the cave in occurred, was killed by falling rock and earth. Miners recovered his body while chopping through the wall to release Norman.

1926 Felix Norman rescued from mine cave in

Clipped By:

usmra_rob

Tue, Jan 24, 2023