

TRAPPED IN PLYMOUTH MINE FOR SEVEN HOURS

Thirteen Employes of Gaylord Shaft Have Narrow Escapes—Were Imprisoned Behind Barricade of Rock and Timber.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 5 (AP).—Thirteen mine workers, trapped in the Red Ash vein of Gaylord colliery at Plymouth, near here, were released from their entombment last night after having been imprisoned for seven hours behind a barricade of top rock and timber, caused by a fall yesterday morning. All were uninjured save for a severe fright.

The fall occurred as the mine crew was walking down the plane in their lunch hour. They were warned of the coming fall by fellow employes and managed to reach a place of safety from the flying debris, although they found themselves blocked from exit. Rescue crews, hurriedly organized, released the captive men.

The Gaylord mine was the scene of a disaster in February, 1894, when thirteen men were killed. Strange to say the accident occurred on the thirteenth of the month, while in last night's near disaster there were thirteen workers imprisoned.

1928 Thirteen miners rescued from Gaylord Colliery after seven hrs

