

MAN FOUND LYING IN MINE GANGWAY

Locust Gap Miner Unable to Explain His Mysterious Plight.

Bernard Cannon, 33, Locust Gap, an employe at Locust Gap Colliery, was found lying unconscious on a mine gangway where he had been working alone. He is now in the Fountain Springs Hospital, conscious and reported recuperating.

The plight of Cannon is mysterious. The man does not know what happened—whether he collapsed through illness, was overcome by gas or was injured. Surgeons at the hospital, after restoring Cannon to consciousness, began a diagnosis of his condition, but had not determined the cause of his ailment this morning.

1937 Bernard Cannon found unconscious in mine

Clipped By:

usmra_rob
Sat, Feb 6, 2021