

COAL MINER RESCUED

POTTSVILLE, Pa (AP)— William Warner, 44-year-old coal miner of Paradise, was in Pottsville Hospital today after fellow workers rescued him from a cave-in trap in a coal mine last night.

Warner was trapped 600 feet underground for seven hours but suffered no apparent injury. He was admitted to the hospital for observation.

The miner was cut off from other workers when a cave-in occurred in a vein of the Coal Creek Slope of Indian Head Coal Co., in nearby Donaldson. Fellow workers drove a pipe through the wall of coal separating Warner from the rest of the crew and pumped compressed air to the trapped man.
