

2 Trapped in Mine, Rescued

ELY, Minn. (AP) — The sound of cracking timbers and sliding rock, terrifying to an iron miner, today tortured the memory of two men rescued after a 20-hour entombment 1,300 feet underground.

Albert Marolt, 41, and Tokvo Hill, 55, offered humble thanks to God and to a desperate team of rescuers who pulled them to safety last night. A cave-in had sealed the two in the dark recesses of one of the deepest underground iron mines in the world.

Still imprisoned somewhere near the 15th level of the Oliver Mining Co.'s Pioneer Mine was a fellow worker, Joe Glinsek.

Workers said there was virtually no chance he was still alive. But fresh crews were sent down today to probe the debris of rocks and mud for Glinsek or his body.
