

California Youth Injured In Fall Into Mine Shaft

SCOTTSDALE (AP) — A Santa Ana, Calif., youth was listed in satisfactory condition Friday after he was pulled from a 150-foot-deep mine shaft north of here.

Scottsdale Rural firemen said Steve Ball, 14, suffered arm and shoulder injuries when he fell into the mine.

Maricopa County sheriff's deputies said Ball was hiking in the area with several companions when the accident occurred.

Officials said Ball was the sixth persons to be pulled from the abandoned mine shaft in two years.
