(By Associated Press)

TRINIDAD, Colo., April 27--There is no escape for the 120 men caught in the fire in the blastings mine of the Victor-American Fuel company near Trinidad, it is feared that all have perished. Search crews reported the explosion having torn down walls and walls of the main shaft.

Superintendent Cameron said he had little hope of saving any of the men who were in the mine when the explosion occurred. If the men still are alive behind the fire, it is a miracle, he said.

The exact number of men caught in the mine still is undetermined. The company has compiled a list of 82 names of men known to be in the mine, but it is asserted that the list is not complete.

All of the bodies found were badly burned, it said, indicating that a great flame swept through the mine after the explosion, probably killing all of the men in the mine instantly.

Although the rescue was unaided, the company officials said, not until it was hoped that any of the men will be taken out alive. The fire, if any, was reported the flames that swept the mine as this mine are said to have suffocated.

The latest parties are working four hundred feet ahead of the rescue crew and tonight had penetrated to the "57th" level, one of the main partitions, where the men are believed for the time being to be safe.

One body, that of Jim Leach, a truck, has been discovered had buried under fallen rock.

The rescue parties are working constantly to reach the mountain, rescue of the pit, but are hampered by lack of air and by falls that have torn down the ladders in important places and make ventilation almost impossible until the ladders have been replaced. All times and centers for this rescue work have been carried by the men in their bodies for more than three-quarters of a mile. At 11:30 tonight it was said that first bodies had been found.

Rescue crews working continuously in their shifts, expect to reach the remaining men before daylight tomorrow. No hope is held out that any of them will be rescued alive.

German Agent
On Trial For Conspiracy

Can You Hear Star-Spangled Banner and Give Enemy Fair Trial?
Jurors Asked

NEW YORK, April 27--Ability to sit in the jury box and "look on as alien enemy" in the face while the struggle of hands playing the Star-Spangled Banner came through the window, and yet give him a fair trial, was a prime qualification required by the trial here today of Captain Franz Hinzpeter, of the German navy. He is accused, with seven others, of conspiracy to disrupt the entire allied munition trade in this country by fomenting strikes on this qualification.

In setting up this qualification, counsel referred to the playing of patriotic airs by hands at revealing trials in City Hall square outside the court. Before the work of getting the jury began, counsel objected to the first group on at this time on the ground that the spirit of the trial would make an impartial trial impossible.

However, twelve men, even found who knew they could be fair under all these conditions. The government is said to regard the case as the climax of its numerous prosecutions of German spies. The defendants include former Representative Robert Taylor and Frank Buchanan, David Lamm and Frank S. Messer.

It is charged that these defendants, National Peace Council, alleged to have been influential in the selection they brought about labor union in munition plants and among workers handling shipments.

Lamar, known as the "Wall of Wall Street," brought from Atlanta, indicted prison, where he is serving a term for conspiracy to obstruct justice, elected to serve as his own counsel. He objected to being placed on trial on the ground that he had been "abducted" by federal officers.

Superintendent Cameron said he had little hope of saving any of the men who were in the mine when the explosion occurred. If the men still are alive behind the fire, it is a miracle, he said.

FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, LONDON, April 27--The German planes of their lines yesterday. The day had been heavily overcast until nearly 4 o'clock in the evening, when the clouds suddenly thinned and the sun broke through. A few German machines had been spotted west of their lines during the afternoon, but when the sun came out, several enemy squadrons which had been hidden all day came out to stretch their wings in the afternoon's sun rays.

They had scarcely taken the air when the British machines poured upon them, and in the afternoon's fighting they showed several German machines were down to crash and eight others to be driven down completely out of control, which are believed to have been destroyed.

Between six and eight the air was filled with wonderful incidents of aerial duels. There were running fights and general melees in which one or two British planes only recently returned to the air after several months of rest, deliberately "out" over an enemy airplane.

And, within six enemy machines have the ground and begin to climb toward the sky. He was sitting at 15,000 feet and remained there until the last of the challenge planes had descended about 4,000 feet.

In the meantime he had noticed that one of the hostile birds was something of a stranger. It had a very long tail and a very short nose. The Britisher, however, did not stop to worry about it. He dived at the highest of the climbers and gave the two birds from his machine gun. Down went the German in a crash just outside a bit of wood.

While this little action was going on five other German had formed between the British planes and his home line. The Britisher tried to break through the formation but failed. Then he turned away as if about to attempt an escape toward the north. All the Germans surrounded the others and was approaching the Britisher when the German pilot blacked range and saw his burst into flames.

"What a lot in line was the long tail, short nose stranger.

"I don't know him down, too," said the pilot, "but after falling a short distance he came back and was purely at right."

A plane which had pilot was carried down by his own machine, but managed to come the British line safely just before sunset. His machine was filled with bullets, the result being that he is being nursed by the most desperate chase, the result being that he is being nursed by the most desperate chase.

"Oh, I just had a bit of luck, that's all."

This young flier, according to his own admission, holds the attitude that he is never to be killed while flying, and with that belief, the most desperate chase, the result being that he is being nursed by the most desperate chase.

Limit Cost Yet"

WASHINGTON, April 27--The administration's food control legislation will be introduced to the house tomorrow by Chairman Laver of the committee.

The measure will incorporate Secretary Houston's suggestion for law to give the government direct supervision of food production and distribution. One would eliminate the agricultural department to become food manufacturing, storage and distribution to one in carrying out the law. The measure would give the president power to direct the Council of National Defense, or some other government body to see to the maximum and minimum prices of foodstuffs. A sum of $1,000,000 is asked for the department of agriculture to use in carrying out the program. Officials hope it will not become necessary to fix prices and believe that that power conferred in the government will in itself prevent the measure being.

WASHINGTON, April 27--The American Society of International Law in session here today formally offered the services of its members to the international law to reserve army officers in training camps this summer.

Amplified was laid on the necessity of training officers in elements of law. They must observe during war operations. Organization of all nations under a common system of legislation, courts and executive branches was the subject of a long formal discussion. Professor Ralph Minor of the University of Virginia advocated in international legislation to formulate laws for all nations.

Creation of an international court with authority to decide all disputes of nations was urged by Professor Charles G. Fenwick of Bryn Mawr college.

David Jayne Hill, former ambassador to Germany, declared that before an international organization is formed the broad principles of an international institution must be drafted.

The Canadian food committee since April 9 was held, it was announced.

WASHINGTON, April 27--With enactment of the selective draft army bill apparently assured, the war department is preparing to set machinery in motion to begin delay in protest under the measure within two years a trained army of 2,000,000 men.

Within ten days after the bill is signed every township in the country will be registering young men for duty, and work will have begun on the system, training, maintenance or camps where preparation of forces for war will start in August of September. Since for the enactment of the administration made for the concentration of the troops assigned to duty.

Decentralization of administration work will be sought by the department in every move it makes. Details will not be decided until the bill has passed but it is known that the registration will be carried on through sheriffs and other county officials by uniformed officers or other federal officials.

PENALTY FOR SLACK. Any military is planned, so that no man liable for registration will have a good excuse for failing to respond. On a date to be set every citizen affected by this bill will be required on pain of heavy penalty to present himself at the nearest possible registration place, where means will be provided for clearing the records and eliminating those exempt. Doubtful cases will be referred to higher authorities.

With the work of these liable for service complete, the task of selecting the men to go in the first increment of 100,000 will begin. It has been suggested that this be done by means of the county jury wheel. The first man whose name is drawn would be with the first 100,000 men to be called out for training within a few months. The second draw would be with the second increment, to be called six months later; the third with the third increment, with duty a year, and so on.

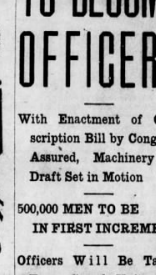

BUILDING CANTONMENTS. Meanwhile the work of building the cantonments will go forward. Regular troops and national guardsmen will be assigned to them with each arm of the service so represented as to provide the framework of a complete army division at each point. The guardsmen will be selected from the territory covered by the training of the cantonments will be done at the cantonments with the exception of the responsibility of each district commandant and he will make such arrangements of his force as he may deem wise. Meanwhile both the regular and guardsmen will continue to report to war strength.

With the new regiment assembled, a rigorous course of training will be undertaken. The "officer" training course will be established as far as new days in each district will begin. At the end of three months of the responsibility of each district commandant and the enlisted men selected from the ranks of the regular for commissions will be given special instruction in the cantonments. The army of young men presents itself at the camp.

The plans call for the transfer to the first 100,000 men obtained by draft of training.
