

A SAD CASE

Referring to the Carlisle mine explosion in which 21 lives were snuffed out a few days ago, the Fayette Tribune, says:

A very sad case is that of a little 15 year old Polish boy named Rex. The boy was in the mine at the time of the explosion and felt some of the effects of blast but was not injured. The shock of the dreadful affair was too much for the little fellow's nervous system and Friday he became violently insane. He is now in McKendree hospital in a straight jacket, his mind a prey to most horrible delusions. The doctors are unable to do anything for him and it is very doubtful if he ever recovers.
