
MEN TRAPPED BY MINE FIRE ARE RESCUED

SCRANTON, Pa., May 27—Between 60 and 70 men who were trapped behind a fire that was raging in the Mount Lookout mine of the Temple Coal company at Wyoming, Pa., were rescued this afternoon, officials of the mining company here announced. All men have been accounted for, it was said.

Thomas Heslop, mine foreman, who was trapped with the men, was the hero of the rescue, officials said. Heslop led the men back through the gangway of the mine, and by erecting lattice work lifted themselves to an airshaft where they remained until the flames in the opening were extinguished.
