

LOST MINER FOUND; SEES DAUGHTER WED

---

Paul Swanbeck's Absence Almost Caused Postponement of Event
in Pittston

---

Special to The Inquirer.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 19.—Lost in the Butler colliery at Pittston Saturday morning, Paul Swanbeck, a miner, was found this morning just in time to prevent postponement of his daughter's wedding. She had for some time prepared for the event, but last night, when no news had been received of her missing father, the guests were notified it might be postponed.

Her father had wandered into some remote workings of the colliery, lost his light and been sickened by the foul air. He was half conscious when found. He was able, lying on a sofa, to witness the wedding, however, after receiving food and drink, which he had not tasted for forty-eight hours.

---

The Philadelphia Inquirer
August 20, 1907