

MICHAEL HUDY, LOST MINER, RESCUED, WILL PROBABLY RECOVER

The condition of Michael Hudy, the Dickson City man, who was rescued by a searching party last Saturday after he had lost his way and wandered for three days in the Eddy Creek mine, of the D. & H., is somewhat improved today and it is now thought he will recover. He was found exhausted from starvation and exposure.

Hudy was found in an old abandoned working lying in a ditch. He could not explain how he had lost his way. He wandered about shouting for help until he fell exhausted.

The Scranton Truth, February 7, 1912